

25x60

This architectural section drawing illustrates a corner of a building. On the left, a vertical wall is shown with a window labeled '25x60'. The window is depicted with a frame and a small opening at the bottom. To the right of the window, the wall continues, and a sloped roof structure is visible. The roof is supported by a series of vertical elements, possibly columns or a wall, and is covered with a pattern of small triangles, likely representing a tiled or shingled surface. The drawing uses clean lines and hatching to define the building's form and materials.
